Atlanta Residents get paid to bike.

Atlanta business gets a TAX break by creating bike friendly work place for its employees. Amongst the turmoil of the financial bailout there was a silver lining for those who opt to, or considered, utilizing alternative transportation to get to and from work.

"There is a provision in the bill to reimburse employers who offer employees compensation for cycling to work. That includes the cost of installing bike lockers, assistance in purchasing bikes, and partial expense reimbursement for using public transit and bikes to get to work."

Compensation works out to about $20.00 per month, which may cover bus fare and basic maintenance for the bike.

Gforce Electric offers an added benefit in the form of electric bikes. The individual that might not consider a bike as a means of transportation due to fitness level or the challenging topography of Atlanta might be motivated by this means of commuting.

Electric bikes are hybrids allowing the rider the option of pedaling or motoring to and from their destination. Hills and long distance are no problem, as bikes reach speeds of 18 to 20 miles per hour, which gets you there quickly and effortlessly.

Other benefits address the volatility of gasoline prices, air quality problems in Atlanta, the traffic gridlock and fitness solutions for those who are not Lance Armstrong.

Atlanta now has a retailer that stocks and services purely Electric Bikes and Scooter exclusively.
